ALPHABET SCRIPTS
By Sophie Knighton

No. of players: 1 or more   Difficulty level: medium   Fun level: WOOOP!

CREATE YOUR OWN SCRIPT USING THE ALPHABET!

Instructions:

1. Write the alphabet down the left hand side of a piece of paper, leaving a line between each letter to give you plenty of space.
2. Starting with A write your first line of dialogue… but here's the tricky bit: the sentence has to begin with the letter 'A'! Something like 'All aboard the fun train!' or 'Apparently there are jelly beans on the moon.'
3. Using a different colour pen, write the next line of dialogue next to the letter B. This line must start with B and should be a response to the first line of dialogue.
4. Make a note to show which colours refer to which character.

For example:

Red = Charlie
Blue = Lola

A – Actually the last biscuit is mine!

B – But you've had more than me

C – Can't you see I'm starving?!

D – Don't pull that trick… how can you be starving when you've had so many?!

E – Excuse me, may I remind you, you had ALL the icecream and the doughnuts!

F – Forgot about that…

And so on…

See if you can get all the way to Z. If you do you'll have your very own 26 line script! Try reading the script out loud and see if you can change your voice for the different characters. Or if a sibling or parent is around, see if they will play the other character.

Extra Challenge:

To really challenge yourself, you could try starting a new script with more characters and colours like this:

Orange = Ruby
Purple = Robert
Green = James

A – Ahem, I am looking for Bob, have you seen him?

B – Bob? No I don't know any Bobs.

C – Can you tell us his surname?

D – Don't know it unfortunately.

E - Exactly why are you looking for him?

F – Fish. He owes me a Fish.

G – Gosh. Well Robert, do you know any Bobs who may owe this lady a fish?

We'd love you to film or record your script and send it to us just pop it over to
